UPI, Eastern break off talks after 2 hours

By Joshua Niziolkiewicz
Administration editor

The negotiations between Eastern and Eastern’s chapter of the University Professionals of Illinois for faculty salary increases is at a standstill, according to both sides of the negotiating process.

“President Surles has unfortunately repeated the debilitating pattern of last year, which is very distressing,” said UPI President David Radavich. “The entire university community suffers in such an atmosphere of anxiety and delay, hampering the most important work of the university – teaching and learning.”

According to Charles Delman, chief negotiator for UPI, the two sides are still about $700,000 apart on the table.

“The administration refused to make any changes,” Delman said. “Basically, the mediator drove two hours for nothing.”

UPI and the administration agreed on a new contract after six months of negotiations last year; however, the salary increase has to be negotiated each year.

Last year, the two parties agreed on an average 6.1 percent increase. Negotiations for this year’s increase began June 1.

Federal mediator Don Hampton of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service from Indianapolis was brought in to try to initiate some movement in the bargaining process.

This marks Eastern’s second consecutive year of using a mediator to try to move along the negotiation process.

“We met for a couple of hours and didn’t really make any progress,” said Bob Wayland, chief negotiator for Eastern. “The university still has the same offer.”

At Tuesday’s Faculty Senate meeting, Delman said the university is only offering 5.5 percent of the

6.9 percent allocated increase of appropriated funds by the state of Illinois.

“(Surles) has given no substantive reason why she doesn’t want to catch up with the other universities,” Delman said. “We’re not even getting our portion.”

“It’s all about the total sum of money,” Wayland said.

The stalemate in negotiations has prompted the UPI to call an emergency meeting at 4 p.m. today in Room 2444 of Buzzard Hall.

“We want to talk about what type of actions are required at this point,” Delman said. “The next step is to have the faculty put pressure on the administration. The faculty are certainly angry at this point.”

Delman said there is no point of having another meeting with the university since they refuse to budge.

Wayland said at the current time he has no plans of initiating another meeting or mediation, either.

“It’s up to either side to initiate mediation,” Wayland said. “We have no meetings scheduled at the moment.”

Since no settlement has been reached, Eastern remains the only university in Illinois that has not settled salary negotiations with faculty.

“Unless we make credible progress in raising salaries to decent levels, we will continue to lose faculty to other institutions and struggle to maintain the high quality of instruction which is the trademark of EIU,” Radavich said.

Rabbit leaves parts of campus powerless

Five buildings go all day Tuesday without electricity

By Michelle Jones
Campus editor

Five buildings on campus were without power most of the day Tuesday as a result of a power outage early Tuesday morning.

Power was eventually restored around 11 p.m. Tuesday night, but campus life was disrupted with two power outages earlier in the day caused by a rabbit and an unknown underground problem, said Gary Reed, director of the physical plant.

The entire campus lost power at 3:30 a.m. Tuesday after AmerenCIPS experienced a problem with an animal in the switch yard, Reed said.

“A rabbit got into the switch yard and caused some problems,” he said.

The problem was fixed and power was restored to the whole campus by 7 a.m., Reed said. However, another problem resulted with the primary feeder on the north side of campus, which caused five buildings to lose power again.

The second power outage affected Old Main, Blair Hall, the Physical Sciences building, Pemberton Hall and the steam plant, Reed said.

“We have several underground cables that need to be analyzed and tested,” Reed said.

The second power outage was not a CIPS problem, but rather an Eastern problem when they brought the power back on, Reed said.

The exact cause of the second power outage was still unknown Tuesday night; however, the problem was isolated to an underground wire circuit under the generator by the Student Services building, Reed said.

Late night accident claims life of fraternity adviser

By Amy Thon
News editor

The chapter adviser for the Delta Chi fraternity died of severe head trauma following a car accident Monday night.

James Price, who had served as the fraternity’s adviser for about 15 years, was thrown from his vehicle near the junction of I-55 and I-74, said Bob Dudolski, assistant director of student life and greek affairs.

“Sometime last night, Dr. Price’s car went off the embankment,” Dudolski said.

Dr. Price’s family is not sure exactly what happened or where Dr. Price was traveling to, but the wreckage of the car was found early Tuesday morning, Dudolski said.

The fraternity met Tuesday night and information from Eastern’s Counseling Center was distributed to the members, Dudolski said.

The counseling center also offered to meet with the chapter in both group and individual sessions as needed.

“The national headquarters has also sent down members to meet with the fraternity,” Dudolski said.

Neither visitation nor funeral arrangements for Dr. Price had been set Tuesday night, but Dudolski said he expected the arrangements to be made this morning.

Dr. Price worked for the school district in Mt. Zion and was an Eastern alum, Dudolski said.

“He was someone who will be extremely missed here, not just by Delta Chi, but by the entire university,” he said.

Dr. Price was involved in developing student leaders on Eastern’s campus and had a strong love the Delta Chi fraternity, Dudolski said.

“He was a tremendous role model,” he said.

Visitation, funeral arrangements will be set today

Faculty Senate feedback will help in search for new VPAA

By Joshua Niziolkiewicz
Administration editor

The Faculty Senate met Tuesday to discuss the criteria for a candidate who will fill the position of vice president of academic affairs.

John Best, faculty senate representative to the vice president search committee, said the feedback from the senate will be used to “shape the ad” placed in the Chronicle of Education.

“I will advocate for what we have said,” said Best. “The person is going to be representing us.”

Anne Zahlan, English professor, said that restoring trust and morale should be one of the main priorities of a new vice president.

“We need someone who will build an institution, not a resume,” Zahlan said. “More and more people are moving or are not around. Those of us left become exhausted.”

Bud Fischer, professor of biology, talked about the opportunities that will be available for a new vice president.

“I think there are a lot of opportunities for growth,” Fischer said. “There are opportunities to create cohesion between the units and the VPAA’s office.”

Fischer said that a person filling this position should be “somebody whose background tells me that they can make tough decisions,” but also said that along with the experience, the person should have a Ph.D.

“Don’t even talk to me about experience,” Fischer said. “The person filling the VPAA slot must have a Ph.D.”

Pat Fewell, professor of secondary education, said she would like a person who has “experience working with budgets, and has some managerial background,” but said communication will be one of the most important factors.

“It would be nice to have a provost that communicates more freely, instead of the going through the chain of command every time,” said Fewell.

CNN/SI anchor will speak as part of Speech Communication Day

By Jamie Moore
Activities editor

CNN/SI cable television network anchor and Eastern alum Larry Smith will be speaking tonight in Lumpkin Hall as part of the Eastern’s Speech Communication Day.

Smith will be talking about his career and accomplishments in the speech communication field and his experiences at CNN, said Mike Bradd, assistant professor of speech communication.

Before working at CNN/SI, Smith was employed by CNN. Currently Smith is an anchor with CNN/SI working during prime time and on the weekends, he said.

CNN/SI is a 24-hour sports and news network that broadcasts to more than 30 million homes.

Smith’s lecture will begin at 7 p.m. in Lumpkin Hall Room 122. For students who wish to meet with Smith before the lecture, a reception will be held at 6:15 p.m. in the student lounge of Lumpkin Hall, he said.

During the day, sessions will be set up in a conference style to allow students the opportunity to attend a session on the topic of their choice, he said.

Four different sessions are scheduled for the day beginning at 9 a.m. and continuing at 10:30 a.m., 1:30 p.m. and 3 p.m. All four sessions will be held in the Charleston/Mattoon, Arcola/Tuscola, Kansas, Effingham and the Sullivan rooms of the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union, Bradd said.

Topics of discussion throughout the sessions will include: radio and television broadcasting; preparing for the job market; using a speech communications degree; graduate schools; communication and technology; research and health communication, he said.

Bradd mentioned two sessions that will be of special interest throughout the day.

One session will focus on public relations and will be given by Mike Lynch, director of media relations for the American Medical Association. Lynch is also an Eastern alum with a degree

An Eastern student tends to her studies at Chick-fil-A in the food court of the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union. Architectural plans to expand the food court, including the addition of a TCBY, are on schedule and under budget.

Food court still being planned

By Michelle Jones
Campus editor

The promised food court in the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union is on schedule and under budget, according to architecture plans, said Lou Hencken, vice president for student affairs.

A meeting to discuss plans for the food court was held Oct. 3. The architect for the project brought in drawings and color schemes, Hencken said.

Those at the meeting viewed the plans and discussed the time line and the budget, said Jody Horn, director of Panther Dining, in an e-mail.

Hencken said he hopes to open bids around mid-December and be able to begin construction in mid-January.

The food court should open by the fall of 2001, Horn said.

The food court will be constructed in the area where Chick-fil-A and Subway are currently located, Hencken said. The food court will be expanded to the balcony area, he said.

The area for the food court will be changed “quite a bit,” but students should still be able to eat at the two restaurants, Horn said.

“We plan to relocate Chick-fil-A and Subway temporarily, probably in the Rathskeller, during the construction, so they will still be available,” she said.

There are also plans to add a

TCBY to campus. Horn said officials are still planning to open the frozen yogurt store sometime in the spring, hopefully soon after spring semester begins, in the same area as Coffee Express.

Hencken said the university is still working on adding a TCBY.

However, the administration has learned from the past not to make promises about construction projects, Hencken said.

“We’re constantly working on that and are hoping to have another option for spring, but we won’t promise anything until the contract is signed,” he said.

Previously, the food court was to be built in the walkway of the union at an estimated cost of $1 million.

The $1 million estimate was raised to $4 million after architectural plans were examined this summer, so plans to reevaluate the location of the food court were made.

First impressions

Construction can benefit a school and make it better, but at the same time, it needs to keep the interests of students in mind. Eastern could keep those interests by taking on less projects at one time, so not as much of the campus is blocked off at the same time and projects can be finished.

Potential students were visiting the campus Monday for the first of Eastern's open house dates, with most saying the construction would not affect their decision to attend Eastern; however, some of them did note the disadvantages of the construction. When it comes down to picking a school – when they have to look at every advantage and disadvantage of a school – they will probably remember those disadvantages more clearly.

One girl could not hear her tour guide because of a bulldozer; next year if she attends school here, that bulldozer could be distracting her from one of her classes. The university needs to remember students are here for academics, and the construction could cause conflicts with learning.

Other students said the construction was a nuisance because students have to walk around everything, and it seemed like the whole campus was under construction.

Lasting impression

Potential students saw the construction, but when they come to campus they will expect to see projects completed.

of this.

Some potential students believe certain projects will be completed by the time they attend school here because that is what they are told. Students who have been on campus know how long a project takes to be finished and that delays can occur; whereas, an incoming freshman would be more likely to believe construction would be finished on time.

The administration has said the food court will be done by the fall of 2001, but that same administration promised seniors that they would see a food court. The library is not predicted to be completed until January 2002, which means next year's class of freshmen also would have to deal with not having one centralized location to do research.

Students visiting campus for one day may not think construction is that bad, but when they see it all year, they might have different opinions. If that happens, freshman enrollment may increase, but sophomores, juniors and maybe even seniors who are frustrated with the construction might transfer to other schools.

Eventually, when the construction is finished, Eastern may be a better looking campus, but looks only go so deep. The administration has to remember the needs of current students and what is also best for them.

The editorial is the opinion of the editorial board of The Daily Eastern News.

How to be a survivor of Family Weekend

After participating in four Eastern Family Weekends, either as a student, or a family member, I'm starting to consider myself an expert on the subject.

I think I've been to every activity offered at least once, and I've been to most of them four times. And, yes, my mom even has a color video magnet commemorating each year.

After four years of Family Weekends, my family is finally burned out on the idea and they are not coming down this year. But, I figured I'd pass along some tips I've learned during other Family Weekends.

For a successful Family Weekend, there are several things you must keep in mind:

Review your class schedule now and figure out where your classes are held. Parents will always ask where you go to class.

Look at the campus map and find out where that building is before they arrive.

If you don't have time to actually identify the right building, just pick one and stick with it. But, it is important to remember which building you pick because as you walk around campus, you are likely to come upon the building from a different direction and if you don't recognize it, your cover will be blown.

Be ready for your parents to ask where the library is. This will be a little tricky to answer since the library is in four different locations. You may want to leave out the fact that part of it is next to Wal-Mart. No one is going to believe that.

There are some test questions you may be asked. For example, if your dad asks where he can get a stiff drink, don't give him a review of the relative merits of the various bars around Charleston. This is a test. Pretend you don't know! (You will get extra credit if you can only tell him where the Dairy Queen is).

Remember, we are about halfway through the semester. All of your textbooks should have been at least opened by now. You can explain that you don't have any highlighting in the books or notes in the margins because we rent our books. But, you will want to have some kind of bookmark about halfway through the book.

Amy Thon
News editor

“And, yes, my mom even has a color video magnet commemorating each year.”

Clean up your room. There is no easy way around this one. Parents will want to see where you are living. On the other hand, don't go to extremes and make it look really nice. You will be back at home this summer and you don't want your mom to be getting any unrealistic expectations.

A trip to the Martin Luther King, Jr University Union bookstore is key. Even if you can't con your parents into buying you anything on the spot, you can at least give them ideas for the holidays or any upcoming birthdays.

Dinner may be a problem. Don't go to a restaurant where the bartender will say, “Hi, (your name here).” Bartenders spend weeks in bartender school learning how to remember the names of the regulars. They think it's good for customer relations. Unfortunately, it's not good for your relations.

Actually, you may want to avoid Charleston restaurants altogether because they will be too busy. Think Champaign or Effingham to find restaurants with no waiting. If you must eat in town, plan on waiting a minimum of two hours.

Also, keep in mind your parents will be expecting you to actually be learning something while you're here. Be ready to spout some knowledge. Here's some to keep in mind:

n P = 3.14159

n Anna Karenina is the name of the novel, not the author.

n 2.5 percent of the Earth's water is fresh water and 1.97 percent of that is in ice caps and glaciers.

Follow these easy steps and your Family Weekend will be a success.

Thank you for the random acts of kindness

Someone at Eastern has been committing random acts of kindness anonymously. Monday I returned from teaching a class to find on my desk a bunch of balloons attached to a cup of fudge. There was an unsigned note containing professional and personal compliments. Thinking I knew who was the likely sender, I called a colleague to thank her. It turns out that she had not sent it, but several weeks ago had received a similar surprise herself. Moreover, she named two or three other faculty and administrators scattered around the campus who had also been favored by this mysterious person.

I am writing to thank our anonymous benefactor for the morale booster. While it would be nice to know who did such a lovely thing, I find myself being suspicious of a number of people who are, I know, capable of being so thoughtful. So, instead of thinking warmly of one person, I am beaming at several friends and colleagues as if each were the responsible party.

Whoever you are, thank you so much. You have brightened my life. And, you have inspired me to repay you by committing the occasional random act of kindness myself.

Speaker talks of his blind trek on the Appalachian Trail

By Karen Kirr
Staff writer

Author and speaker Bill Irwin inspired and entertained students Tuesday evening with a video and lecture on his 2,168-mile trek on the Appalachian Trail, from Georgia to Southern Maine.

Irwin's discussion on motivation and his disabilities as a blind man, sponsored by the University Board, provided those in attendance the opportunity to imagine his struggles and to ponder the encouraging words of advice he gave them.

Irwin, a recovered alcoholic, described his experiences and feelings as he backpacked for eight and a half months through the wilderness.

Irwin traveled with his former seeing eye dog, Orient, who passed away a few years ago, according to Irwin. Orient led the way on their journey by following the odor of other hikers.

"The statement from all the locals was 'You'll never make it,'" Irwin said. "I had to discount everyone who said that."

Irwin said the experience was a valuable learning opportunity. His experience led him to write his 1992 book, "Blind Courage."

vacation,” Irwin said.

“We had every kind of obstacle you can encounter in the wilderness.”

Telling himself not to take himself too seriously on the trek to Maine helped him through it, he said.

“Every time the pain got to be too much, I would tell myself a funny story,” he said. “It works every time.”

Whenever the pain of life becomes so intense you feel cannot take a step physically or emotionally, use humor to ease it, he said.

Irwin said once he reached his destination, the pain became insignificant.

“(Backpacking the entire trail) changed my life forever,” Irwin said. “I became so much closer to God.”

Irwin said one's goal should be to move from success to significance.

“It's not the destination that's important; it's the journey,” Irwin said.

Pageant producers spice up telecast to lure younger viewers

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — With Miss America contestants strutting across a new stage, a boy band performing live and a new techno-pop version of “There She Is” booming in the background, producers of the 80th annual pageant are hoping to drown out an old problem Saturday — drab TV ratings.

The old rite of September has even been pushed forward a month so the ABC-TV broadcast wouldn’t have to compete with NBC’s coverage of the Olympic Games.

“It has a much younger, more contemporary feel,” said the show’s producer, Jeff Margolis, who gave reporters a look at the opening number Tuesday.

The show will pick up the pace by flashing the contestants’ personal information on TV in a Web-style format during the opening parade of states

A performance by the boy band O-Town, made famous on TV’s “Making the Band” show, is planned also.

Margolis said the show’s not even called a “pageant” any longer. The new name is just “Miss America.”

Margolis acknowledged there’s a fine line between appealing to young viewers and turning off older women who traditionally make up the biggest share of the Miss America viewers.

“We have not taken away any of the traditions the Miss America program stands for,” he said.

Donny and Marie Osmond will be the show’s hosts for a second year.

Firestone’s top executive steps down

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The top executive of Bridgestone/Firestone Inc. stepped down Tuesday after a 40-year career with the tire maker, now engulfed in a furor over its handling of the Firestone recall.

Chairman and CEO Masatoshi Ono, among the executives who publicly apologized for the recall in testimony before Congress, will return to his native Japan and remain on the board of directors for the parent Bridgestone Corp.

Ono, 63, did not attend a news conference announcing the management change, but said this week that the move wasn’t because of the recall of 6.5 million tires. He instead cited health problems and his age.

His American successor, executive vice president John Lampe, takes over the embattled company immediately.

He acknowledged the intense scrutiny given to Firestone tires, which are under investigation for 101 deaths in the United States and more than 50 elsewhere.

“We know that many people, not just in the United States, but around the world are now questioning our integrity and the safety of our tires,” Lampe said.

“And we know that we can’t blame anyone else for people losing trust in Firestone products — not our customers, not our business partners, not the media or Congress. The responsibility is ours.”

Lampe said the company hoped to complete the recall by next month and that 3.7 million tires had been replaced so far.

He said more management changes will be announced soon.

Ono joined Tokyo-based Bridgestone in 1959 and headed the U.S. operations based in Nashville for seven years.

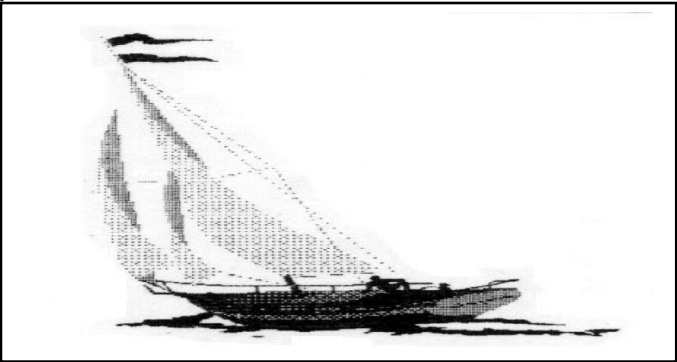

Reports of his departure have circulated since the August recall of Firestone’s ATX, ATX II and Wilderness tires, some of which were installed by the Ford Motor Co. as standard equipment on its Explorer and other vehicles.

During a deposition Monday — part of several consumer lawsuits filed against Bridgestone/Firestone and Ford — Ono said he told Bridgestone president Yoichiro Kaizaki last month that he would like to retire “because I will be turning 64 next year and I didn’t feel I was in particularly good health either.”

He also said he didn’t think the public apologies were an admission of corporate guilt.

Student Senate will consider RHA input on housing matters

By Christine Demma
Student government editor

The Student Senate will consider approving a resolution tonight about the way senate members should seek approval from the Residence Hall Association on any issues affecting university housing.

The meeting will be held at 7 p.m. in the Arcola/Tuscola Room on the third floor of the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union.

Senate member Erin Wilcox submitted the resolution, which states "the Residence Hall Association is an informed voice on most of the issues that deal with on-campus housing," and "any issues dealing with the residence halls will either directly or indirectly affect all students living in on-campus housing."

Wilcox therefore recommends "that the RHA be directly informed and actively involved with all legislation dealing with University housing issues and policies."

In other business, two bylaws and a senate bill that were tabled last week will be voted on by the senate. Two bylaw changes were submitted by senate member Joe Robbins, one recommending a change in the number of absences a senate member is allowed per semester and the other clarifying the leave of absence of a senate member.

Robbins is recommending senate members only be allowed three absences per semester instead of the four absences they are currently allowed.

The other bylaw change pertains to the speaker of the senate's power to appoint an acting chair to a senate committee if the committee chair takes a leave of absence.

Also tabled was a bill allocating $68 for two ads to be placed in The Daily Eastern News about special elections, which will be held Oct. 16 and 17, and for an academic forum.

Victim identified, cause of death still unknown

CHAMPAIGN (AP) - A man who died after struggling with police officers over the weekend did not die of blunt force trauma, the Champaign County coroner said Tuesday.

It is still too early to say what caused the death of 45-year-old Gregory E. Brown, coroner Roger Swaney said.

The Champaign coroner's office is seeking medical records and Swaney said he would interview family members to learn Brown's medical history.

Champaign Police Chief Bill Becker had earlier said autopsy reports showed Brown had heart problems and blocked coronary arteries, but Swaney denied those reports.

Brown, who was about 5-foot-10 and 300 pounds, died Sunday after struggling with Champaign police officers outside an apartment complex.

Chief Becker said only five or six officers ever had physical contact with Brown. He said earlier reports that as many as 15 officers were involved in the struggle were incorrect.

Brown had been spotted acting suspiciously behind an apartment building early Sunday morning, police said. Brown refused to follow an officer's directions and became combative, police said.

The incident is being investigated by a team of officers from several local agencies.

Powerless

Campus physical plant electricians worked throughout the day and the night to try to restore power, Reed said.

Late Tuesday night electricians identified the problem as something wrong with an underground linkage box in manhole No. 2.

Reed said he called some departments to pass on information about the power outage.

"We've heard anything from two days to four days (until power will be restored)," said Kay Woodward, acting dean of the College of Adult and Continuing Education, located in Blair Hall.

The inconvenience of the power outage was "huge," said Jeanne Kamp, in the Budget Office, located in Old Main.

"I think it's been that way for everybody," she said. "So much of what we do every day is on the computer and we can't do any of it."

Woodward agreed the power outage was a disadvantage because computers could not be used.

"All of us are so technology dependent now," Woodward said.

Other departments said the power outage gave them the opportunity to do other projects.

"We have been able to do some projects we've delayed because we just didn't have time," Woodward said.

"As far as getting real work done, we haven't been able to do anything. We're getting to play in the dark."

Vitamin makers settle lawsuit

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Six foreign vitamin companies agreed to pay $442 million to settle a lawsuit alleging they conspired to fix prices, the attorneys general of Illinois and Wisconsin announced Tuesday.

The lawsuit alleged the companies, which produce vitamin pills and supplements for fortified foods and agricultural feed, met in secret to fix prices from 1989 to 1998.

The companies will pay $335 million to 21 states, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico. Businesses that bought vitamins in the 23 jurisdictions will be eligible to participate in a separate $107 million claim fund.

"We allege that for more than a decade, these companies met secretly around the world to conspire to drive up the cost of vitamins and vitamin products costing consumers, businesses and state governments millions of dollars," said Illinois Attorney General Jim Ryan.

Under the agreement, Illinois will receive more than $15 million, Ryan said.

America" dragging a dummy behind it.

The NAACP wants an investigation; Rockridge High School officials say the students meant no harm and have been disciplined.

The incidents occurred during the school's homecoming parade Sept. 21. Five students, some of them members of the junior class student government, waved a Confederate flag while the song "Dixie" played through on a float. Another float dragged a dummy with jumper cables attached to it. A banner on the front of the float read "hillbilly rednecks."

Superintendent Dick Stoltz said there was no harm intended. He said "hillbilly rednecks" is a nickname for the Young Farmers of America. He said the Confederate flag represented the rebelliousness of the teens.

Benefits sought for teachers seeking recertification

SPRINGFIELD (AP) - Teachers in some Illinois school districts want stipends and other compensation for the time they spend reviewing and approving peers' professional improvement plans.

Legislators have complained that they did not intend for teachers to make money from the recertification plan. But administrators say they have to pay the bill for a state-initiated program.

"It came to the district as an initiative from the state Legislature, and the teachers unions and the school districts become responsible for payment," said Danville school Superintendent David Fields, president of the Large Unit District Association. "The school districts are being left high and dry."

"I just try to make the best with the playing time and carries that I get, but all we, as a running back group, care about is winning."
Taylor, who is No.8 in the OVC in running yards with 268 yards on 37 carries, knows that not all of the attention that the running backs have gotten this season should go to the backs, but some of it should go to the offensive line.

"I'll tell you this: the offensive line that I ran behind on Saturday was the best that I have behind since I have been here," Taylor said. "They were not only good on Saturday, but they have worked their butts off all year."
After having his most productive game of the season, Taylor is looking forward to running the rest of the year with a lot of confidence.
"After the game on Saturday, I just can't wait to get my hands on the football and run," Taylor said. "I will be running with a lot more confidence now."

Instead the Bears were killed by the Saints 31-10. This was quite possibly the most embarrassing loss I have ever endured while being a Bears fan.
The Saints controlled the ball for over 38 minutes of the game, compared to the Bears 22 minutes.
The Bears defense also allowed 24 first downs while our offense only made 13 first downs for a combined 245 total yards of offense.
That's embarrassing – 245 yards of offense against the Saints.
I know that our one superstar on offense, Marcus Robinson, was out and that did not allow quarterback Cade McNown to throw any jump-ball passes for touchdowns. That could be a reason for three interceptions on Sunday, but there is no excuse for the way we played.

I don't think Jauron is a bad coach and I don't think the Bears are that bad, but for some reason, they just can't win.
I guess I will just have to do what I do every year with the Bears and hope for a chance at a draft pick in the top five.
Too bad the Bears will blow that by winning two of their last three and end up drafting 12th.
Even our putrid coach from a few years ago has gone to a winning team as Wannstadt's Dolphins have opened the season 5-1 and in first place of one of the toughest conferences in football the AFC East.
I have even considered jumping on the St. Louis or Indianapolis football bandwagon, but I just can't do it like I hope other Bears fans won't do.
Just think of the reoccurring Chicago theme of 'wait until next year.'
The Rams did; why can't we?

Eastern loses grip over Saint Louis

Five-game struggle of offensive talent results in a 3-2 loss for the Panthers

By Troy Hinkel
Staff writer

Eastern's volleyball team lost a tough ly fought five-game road match Tuesday to the Saint Louis Billikens 15-11, 15-12, 11-15, 15-17, 8-15.

The Panthers (12-6) were seeking revenge from a five-game loss to Saint Louis (8-10) last year, but unfortunately Eastern couldn't pull out the victory.

In front of a road crowd of over 330, the Panthers stunned the Billikens by opening game one with a 15-11 win as they held St. Louis's offense to an attack rate of .103, which is well below their season average of .183.

The second game was much the same for the Panthers, and took game two 15-12 as they again held the Billikens to under their season average.

Saint Louis hit only .154 while the Panthers pounded a match-high 21 kill total for the game.

With a two-game lead going into game three, the Panthers seemed to fall apart as the Billikens stepped up their offense and defense, forcing Eastern to make 10 attack errors out of only 38 attempts.

Saint Louis used this to their advantage as they took the game 15-11.

Going into the game four, the Panthers were hoping to rebound to take the match, but Saint Louis used its momentum to take a hard fought 17-15 win in game four.

The downfall for Eastern was its 13 attack errors compared to only 8 for the Billikens.

With rally scoring in place for game five, it was just a matter of who came out stronger, and with the momentum in the Billikens favor the Panthers fell behind and could not recover, despite hitting .333 for the last game.

Saint Louis used a .421 attack percentage to take the game 15-8 and complete the three game comeback.

For the match, the Panthers hit .150 while committing 40 attack errors compared to a .182 percentage and 34 attack errors for Saint Louis.

The Panthers were led by Carrie Stevens, who had a career-high 27 kills, as she hit a team-high .340 for the game. She was followed by teammate Leslie Przekwas, who added 13 kills and five total blocks for the game.

Kim Blackwell also finished with a team-high 19 digs while Genevieve Ramos added a team-high 33 assists.

Saint Louis was led by Colleen Hunter, who improved upon her 4.881 kills per game average, as she finished with a match-high 38 kills.

Teammate Brooke Minniear finished with a game-high 21 digs while setter Shannan Swiney had a match-high 62 assists.

Eastern will be in action again on Thursday at home against OVC leader Southeast Missouri (11-8, 7-0) at 7 p.m. in Lantz Gym.

Taylor runs with confidence

Sophomore running back belongs in Eastern's offense

By Anthony Braviere
Associate sports editor

After playing five games, Eastern has learned that they have a new force at the running back position in J.R. Taylor.

The sophomore running back showed that he belongs in the Panther offense with his 149-yard performance on 18 carries this past Saturday.

"J.B. (Jabarey McDavid) hurt his ankle, and I was real happy to get in there and produce," Taylor said. "They needed me on Saturday and I was ready to go in there and do the best I could."

Throughout the beginning of the season, Eastern has been able to use a host of running backs in its offensive scheme. It has had one of the best running offenses in the Ohio Valley Conference, ranking second.

But with McDavid and fellow tailback Andre Raymond doing such a good job so far this season, Taylor has limited carries and playing time this season.

Despite not getting the accolades that some of the other running backs have gotten this season, he realizes that the most important goal is winning.

"With all of things that J.B. has been doing this season, I haven't gotten all of the carries I would have liked," Taylor said.

The Bears' reoccurring theme of frustration

Enough is enough! I think I am starting to feel the pain that the hoards of Chicago Cubs fans feel every year from the disappointment of their team.

Despite my affiliation with the St. Louis Cardinals, I am a true Chicago fan when it comes to football. I have been that way since my birth and I am tired of saying 'wait till next year,' the same way Cub fans do.

It seems the luck of Chicago lately; the Cubs struggle, the Bears stink, the Bulls can't buy a mediocre player, and the White Sox blow up in the playoffs.

Other than the Bulls, the only team I care about is the Bears, and I am beginning to give up on them.

With a horrid 1-5 start, the Bears have the second worst record in football, behind the San Diego Chargers, who, simply put, don't deserve to be in the NFL right now.

It's woeful to see just how far the Bears have fallen since the 1985 championship season. Ever since that year, Bears fans have been expecting a return to greatness, and after Dick Jauron's inaugural season last year the glimmer of hope was started again.

Jauron gave new breath to the team that had all but been ran into the ground by his predecessor, Dick Wannstedt.

Their 6-10 finish had flashes of things to come, and if we would have had a kicker, we could have even made the playoffs. Then the off-season came and the Bears made acquisitions that were supposed to put them back into the playoffs.

We resigned QB Jim Miller, and signed cornerback Thomas Smith, and a pass rusher in Phillip Daniels just to name a few. With the addition of these players, fans expected the Bears to compete, but so far all we have seen is an appalling display of football.

Let's go back to last week, in which the Bears and the Saints played in the Ditka Bowl at Soldier Field. Before the pre-game kickoff, I expected the Bears, who beat Green Bay on the road the week before, to dominate the loathsome Saints.
